Greetings,

(See email message to me below, from Dr. Ann Cornell-Bell. I hope to email you some additional information from her in a day or so, depending on my Internet connectivity.)

Included below (as a reminder) is a copy of the contact information I received by email from Dr. Cornell-Bell in Westbrook, Connecticut, on September 4th, with some comments from her pertaining to the main areas of focus in her professional efforts as they relate to the still-worsening COVID-19 pandemic in large parts of the U.S. Over the past 1-3 weeks, the most credible predictions for the course of the pandemic in California over the next 1 to 3 months have been growing increasingly ominous. Given the circumstances, El Dorado County (both its people and its government) would do well to seek out expert help and advice on possible ways of dealing more effectively with the pandemic from sources outside of in-state agencies and institutions. The latter two are not all-knowing or omnipotent. There are other sources who may be equally good, or different, or in some instances better (located in other states and nations).

One key sign of good governance (and common sense) is both the willingness and ability to seek out more than one or a few sources of expert help and advice on such matters as potentially catastrophic pandemics, on which both expertise and long experience are likely to be essential to success. Dr. Cornell-Bell has these attributes.

Her lead-in comments (below) speak for themselves. I encourage you to give them the serious attention I believe they deserve. In future email messages, I will provide additional information about what I've learned since last January about the growing pandemic; about how and why various federal, state, county and municipal government agencies in the U.S. have almost invariably failed to respond as effectively as their counterparts in a number of other nations have; and about why and how government-agency parochialism, insularity, indecisiveness, and fear of political blowback in the U.S. in recent years have added to the ongoing COVID-19 mess, which is rapidly becoming a catastrophe.

Wishful thinking and denialism do no stop pandemics, wildfires, or hurricanes. Coordinated, well-informed action and applicable measures do. Dr. Ann Cornell-Bell is a well-informed source for applicable measures to help deal with the COVID-19 pandemic. I strongly recommend contacting her, soon -- before the situation gets worse, which it will very likely do.

I also strongly recommend forwarding this email message with my comments and her contact information on to the California Department of Public Health and all El Dorado County public-health and similar professionals, emergency-response agencies, appropriate hospital administrators and medical staff, business and community-service organizations, in-county school districts and teachers' organizations, and other appropriate groups -- so they can contact her and make use of her advice and services, if they elect to do so independent of county government.

Also, please forward this message to all relevant municipalities in the county, as well as neighborhood associations.

I will gladly reply to responsible questions regarding my major concerns about the COVID-19 pandemic and what ought to be done to address them -- insofar as my time and abilities allow. (I expect to be leaving for Colorado on Saturday, 9/19, and be back by Tuesday, 9/22, if all goes well.)

Note: This is to confirm that I have absolutely no financial ties or business ties to Dr. Cornell-Bell, whatsoever. I first learned of her extensive background in cell biology and related biomedical sciences and her past and ongoing activities pertinent to the present pandemic, through a sister of hers who I knew at the University of Wisconsin-Madison between 1970 and 1990. My comments about Dr. Cornell-Bell are based entirely on my professional experience at networking and forming knowledge-based opinions of the professional qualifications of individuals and organizations, both in the public and private sectors.

Best regards.

Hi Terry, (The addition of blue boldface print is mine, for emphasis. - T. Kayes)

Please feel free to share my contact information with people. I am currently committed to creating COVID-19 solutions for schools, businesses, government entities, and healthcare establishments with a group of Scientists. MDs and entrepreneurs.

As a group we have shown solutions for detection of COVID-19 using a point of care Rapid Test, protection using new technology masks, and new disinfection technologies, which provides the tools needed to manage the COVID-19 pandemic. We are happy to present a conference call if you would like us to.

Regards
